A Big Business Mistake

The oil industry is a highly profitable business. People have made trillions of dollars from finding and selling oil. It seems a sensible conclusion to make, then, that the man who invented the oil drill must have been a very rich man. Sadly, this is not the case. The man who first learned and then taught the world how to obtain oil from deep within the earth died a poor and forgotten man.

The man who invented the oil drill was named Edwin Drake. Drake was a former train conductor. In 1858, he was hired by the company Seneca Oil to research ways to take oil from the ground. It has been said that the only reason Drake was hired for the job was because he was able to travel for free on the railways. Drake performed his research in Pennsylvania, U.S.A., but after one year, Seneca Oil gave up on him. They didn't think that he would be successful, so they refused to finance his research any longer. Seneca Oil really should have waited just a little bit longer. Just a few months later, Drake developed a way to hand-pump oil from the ground. The method was similar to the one used to drill for salt. So, what was Drake's mistake? He should have become the wealthiest man alive; however, he never patented his invention. Other entrepreneurs in the area quickly copied his oil drill and started their own businesses. Within a few years, Drake was out of work and money.

Ship of Misfortune

In 1829, a ship called the Mermaid broke apart in Australian waters after striking a reef. Fortunately, the crew was able to swim to a group of rocks in the water and hang on until they could be rescued. Three days later the crew of a passing ship called Swiftsure picked them up. However, not long after, a storm hit and the winds were so strong that Swiftsure was swept on to another part of the reef, wrecking this ship as well. Once again, the crew had to abandon the ship. Eight hours later, a boat called Governor Ready picked up the crew of both the Mermaid and Swiftsure. Governor Ready was already full of passengers and cargo, but they were able to squeeze the newcomers aboard. What happened next seems too incredible to believe, but three hours later, Governor Ready caught fire and had to be abandoned. The passengers and crews rowed away from the ship in longboats. Next, the ship the Comet rescued the combined crew of the previous three ships. But, five days later, an intense storm destroyed this ship as well. After clinging to broken pieces of ship and fighting off sharks for hours, the survivors were rescued by the crew of the Jupiter. Twelve hours later, the Jupiter sank! Eventually, all the survivors were picked up by another ship, The City of Leeds, which did finally reach Sydney Harbor. As if the startling coincidence of sinking five ships was not strange enough, there was one additional coincidence. It is told that one of the passengers on the Jupiter was an elderly woman from England who was traveling to Australia to find her son, who had been missing for 15 years. As it happened, she found him before she reached Sydney: He was one of the original crew members from the Mermaid!

The History of the Toothbrush

Since many people today like to have clean, bright white teeth, it is surprising that toothbrushes only became common in the twentieth century. But just because people haven't been using toothbrushes doesn't mean that they haven't always tried to keep their teeth clean and their breath fresh. People have cleaned their teeth in a variety of different ways for thousands of years. For example, they used a device called a chew stick. This was a small, thin stick, about the size of a pencil that people chewed on, to remove food and debris from their teeth. Chew sticks were made from special trees that smelled and tasted good so that they would also freshen the mouth and breath. Some form of chew stick was used all over the world for thousands of years. Another way that people cleaned their teeth was by rubbing baking soda or chalk on them. The first bristled toothbrush, or toothbrush with stiff hairs on the end, originated in China almost six thousand years ago. In 1780, the first toothbrush was mass-produced in England by William Addis. These toothbrushes were made of animal bone. The bristles on expensive toothbrushes were badger hair. By the early 1800s, bristled toothbrushes were in general use in Europe and Japan. As technology progressed natural bristles were eventually replaced by synthetic bristles. The first toothbrush with nylon bristles became available in 1938. The first electric toothbrush was invented in Switzerland in 1954. In January 2003, Americans chose the toothbrush as the number one invention that they could not live without.

Language Development in Children and Adults

Throughout history, there has been much debate over which language was the first" language. An ancient Egyptian pharaoh named Psammetichus I once tried to prove that that all humans had one natural language that they would speak if no other language was taught to them. Supposedly, he even conducted an experiment to discover which language children would speak naturally, without any instruction. According to legend, he gave two newborn babies to a shepherd. The shepherd was told never to speak to the babies, but to care for them and listen closely to hear what their first word would be. The babies spent their first year tending sheep with the shepherd, but the shepherd never spoke to them. One day, one of the babies cried out, "becos"—not surprisingly, a sound similar to the sound a sheep makes. However, this sound was also similar to the word for bread in the Phrygian language. Thus, Psammetichus I concluded that the Phrygian language must be the oldest and most natural language. Phrygia was an ancient civilization, located in what is now the country of Turkey. Today, linguists know that there is not any one language that is natural for humans to speak. A child will learn any language easily and naturally when he or she is exposed to the language at an early age. Linguists have studied language development thoroughly over the years. They would like to find out how children seem to acquire language so quickly and easily, yet for an adult, learning a new language is often a much more difficult and lengthy process. If adults could imitate the way that children learn a language, the language-learning process might become a lot easier!

1. Choose the main idea.

- A. Some languages are easier to learn than others.
- B. There is not one language that is more natural or better than other languages.
- C. There is one language that is the most natural for people to learn to speak.
- D. Adults do not learn language as easily as children do.

2. The first word one of the babies cried out was._____

- A. the Phrygian word for milk
- B. the Phrygian word for sheep
- C. similar to the sound all babies make
- D. similar to the sound a sheep makes

3. Psammetichus I concluded that._____

- A. the Egyptian language was the most natural
- B. the Phrygian language was the most natural
- C. no language was more natural
- D. sheep could speak the Phrygian language

4. A linguist is probably a person._____

- A. that studies children
- B. that studies shepherds
- C. who studies languages and language development
- D. who studies only ancient languages

5. What do some linguists think would make language learning easier for adults?

- A. If they could learn language the way that children do.

The Lost Dutchman Mine

Legends of lost treasure are exciting, and there are many people whose hobby is treasure hunting. They give up months or even years of their lives searching for treasures that may or may not have ever existed . One legendary treasure that has been sought for over one hundred years is known as the Lost Dutchman Mine. Legend has it that in 1846, a man whose name was Waltz emigrated from Germany to the United States. He then traveled to Arizona in search of gold. One day, while he and another man named Wiesner were mining in the mountains, they found a deep vein of gold in the earth. They secretly worked on the mine, digging out the gold and hiding it nearby . One day while working at the mine, Wiesner had a fight with some other men and was killed. Waltz, upset about his partner's death, hid the entrance to the mine, took only enough gold to live on and left the area. He moved to a small farm some distance away, where he led a quiet life . Year later, he decided to marry a woman whose name was Julia. He told her about the mine and showed her the pieces of gold that he still had. He promised to share the gold with her, and they made plans to travel to the mine together. Unfortunately, before they could make the journey, Waltz became very ill. He drew a map showing her the location of the mine, and where he had hidden the gold that he had already dug. Soon after, Waltz died. Julia traveled to the mountains hoping to find the gold and the mine, but she never did . To this day, hundreds of treasure hunters still explore the mountains in Arizona looking for the lost mine .
