Monopoly

Monopoly started around 1900, and a version of the story, however, is that in Northampton, Pennsylvania. Darrow made small stores, before it was taken over by a bank through a severe financial crisis, and then sold to many.

Players do this by buying properties and then they spend money developing these properties. Players who land on them. Players aim to make their opponents so poor that they have to sell many properties that the other players have to buy. There is a time limit.

Some people criticize the game because it encourages your opponents losing their money. This is not healthy to encourage the game is based on unhealthy competition. Some people say that the game helps develop useful skills because they become poor.

Question 1 :

What is true according to section 1?

- The original game may have had an educational purpose.
- Darrow bought the game from a small store.
- Players could win money in real life.
- Sales suffered because of the financial crisis.

Question 2 :

Monopoly

Monopoly started around 1900, and the version of the story, however, is that in a small town, Pennsylvania. Darrow made all stores, before it was taken over by a company through a severe financial crisis, and many people lost their money.

As far as possible. Players do this by buying properties and spending money developing these properties. Players who land on them. Players aim to make their opponents so poor that they have to sell their properties that the other players have to buy. The limit is that you can only own four properties.

It is not healthy to encourage competition because it causes your opponents losing their money. This game is based on unhealthy competition because it causes them to become poor.

- it has become too expensive for most people.
- sales have gone down a lot.
- it has remained popular despite the changes.
- the rules of the game have stayed the same.

Monopoly

Section I

Some claim that the original version of the game Monopoly started around 1900, as a way of explaining tax laws. The best-known version of the story, however, is that it was invented in 1934 by a man named Charles B. Darrow from Germantown, Pennsylvania. Darrow sold it on a small scale to friends and some small stores, before it was taken over by Parker Brothers. At that time, the world was going through a severe financial crisis and becoming very rich – even in a game – appealed to many.

Section II

The object of the game is to make as much money as possible. Players do this by going around the board. They can then choose to spend money developing these properties, the purpose of charging a higher 'rent' to other players who land on them. Players aim to own as many properties as possible so that they eventually make their opponents so poor that they must go bankrupt. The winner is either the player who owns so many properties that the other players cannot afford to buy any more, or the player with the most money after an agreed time limit.

Section III

Part of the fun of the game is enjoying seeing your opponents losing their money. However, the game has received a large amount of criticism, however. Some people point out that it is not healthy to encourage people to value money so highly. They also say that the game is based on unhealthy competition and does not promote good moral values. Although a lot of people say that the game helps develop useful skills, many people feel that it is unfair to make fun of people because they become poor.

Section IV

Despite the criticism, there is no doubt that the game has been extremely popular. Its popularity throughout its history is measured in the hundreds of millions. Several changes have been made over the years and many updated versions have appeared in different countries. One version of the game, sold for $25,000.
