Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

¹ Why do our children have 12 weeks of summer vacation? We have to change the school schedule. Saudi students lose between two and three months of learning during their summer vacations. This is not necessary. Away from school for so many weeks, students forget what they learned. Experts say that students lose math skills and reading skills. At the beginning of school in September, teachers need to review last year's studies for the first four to six weeks of school. This is not a good use of classroom time.

² Summer vacations are not great opportunities for learning. Unfortunately, most fathers cannot be with their kids during the long summer months. Some families can pay for summer camps, but many of them cannot. Most children stay home and watch TV. They are bored. Most children do not learn skills during the summer.

To the Editor:

⁵ Summer vacation is a great opportunity. Kids can discover the world outside school. They can learn to do things they can't learn in a classroom. They can learn to swim and ride bikes. They can travel to summer camps. They can get work experience or help people in the community. Basically, they can get more experience in the world.

⁶ I am against a longer school year. I think summer vacations give families time to relax together. During the school year, everyone is busy. During summer vacations, we learn to relax. We take time to do things together. Vacations are good for families.

1. Darley and Latane researched the bystander effect using three groups of students in different situations. When students thought they were alone, 85 percent tried to help someone in need. When they thought one other student was present, 31 percent tried to help. Finally, only 62 percent helped when students thought four other bystanders were present. Based on these results, Darley and Latane concluded that having more witnesses means that people are less likely to help.

¹ It is very difficult for family businesses to survive. In the United States, about 66 percent of all businesses fail. However, 70 percent of the owners can pass them down to their sons and daughters. There are many reasons for failure. One of the biggest reasons is that the family members fight, and the business collapses.

² The Dassler family is an interesting example. Rudolf and Adolf were brothers in Germany. They owned a shoe company called Dassler Brothers Shoe Company. They got along well, and they disagreed about many things. In 1948, the brothers started their own companies. Rudolf Dassler called his company Puma, and Adolf called his company Adidas. Today, Puma and Adidas are successful companies, but the Dassler family is not.

³ Another example is the fight between the world's richest brothers. When a father passed down his company to them, the brothers had many disagreements. It depends on the family's strengths and talents. However, families often have problems to the workplace. The brothers did not communicate their problems together. As a result, the company collapsed.

⁴ Family businesses also fail because of changing times. Fifty years ago, there were many small family-owned stores. But today, small family-owned stores cannot compete with large chain stores. This is another challenge in a family business. A successful company today must adapt. Younger generations may not want this lifestyle. They may want more freedom.

Think Before You Buy
by Ted Carson

People throw things away a lot more than they used to. In the past, people would repair broken things, not many people do now. In the world, there are growing mountains of trash because of this. However, some people think that it is a good thing that we have more things.

People, our appetite for new products contributes to the amount of trash we produce. As consumers, we want the latest clothes, the best TVs, the latest products. The result is that we throw away more things. In the U.S., when consumers get rid of electronics, 80 percent of them are recycled.

Some people say that to lessen the amount of trash and to protect the environment, we should think about how to fix something to make it last longer. Repairing our possessions and changing our buying habits can help us take care of the environment.

Some people support the idea of throwing things away. They say that new things are so good that they sell for less. As a result, sometimes it costs more to buy a new thing than it does to buy an old one. You can buy a new thing that thanks to advances in technology, products and services. The benefit of increased features makes people want to buy new things.

Job interview :

1 You finally got that call you have been waiting for an interview for a new job. At first, you will probably feel overjoyed, but as the interview gets closer, you are likely to get more and more nervous about the big day. Experts say that you only have 30 seconds to make a good first impression at a job interview. The end of the job interview is left for applicants to ask questions. The key to a successful interview is to be prepared and stay professional at all times. To make sure you do your best, remember these ten tips:

2 Be prepared. Learn as much as you can about the company before the interview. Go to the business's website and read it so you are aware of how things work there. Think of questions the interviewer might ask you and practice your answers with a friend. Know how to discuss both your strengths and your weaknesses because you will be asked about both!

3 Dress the part. If you walk in wearing jeans and a T-shirt, you are not likely to get the position. Wear clothing that is neat, clean, and presentable. Most companies expect applicants to wear business clothes, such as a shirt and tie or a nice suit. Dressing well shows that you are serious about the job.

4 Be punctual. Arriving late to an interview can be deadly. No employer wants to hire someone who is not responsible enough to come to work on time. Get to interview 10-15 minutes early to help yourself relax before you step into the office.

5 Make eye contact. Look your interviewer in eye when you greet him or her and keep eye contact throughout the entire interview. Keeping eye contact shows the other person that you are both honest and confident 6 Be polite. Sit up straight when you are being interviewed, listen carefully to what the interviewer is saying, and avoid using slang or bad words. If you don't understand a question, ask politely, "Could you please repeat that?" When you are polite, you appear more professional and are more likely to get the job.

7 Don't interrupt?. Interrupting is rude. Let the interviewer finish what she or he is saying. If you have something important to say, try to remember it and wait for a moment of silence to speak up

8 Find shared interests. Try to notice what the interviewer finds important. Listen for topics that you both know something about and discuss them. If you can't think of anything, nod yes or agree with points that the interviewer makes.

9 Sell yourself. Don't be afraid to talk about your accomplishments. Employers want to hire people who are successful and confident in their abilities. However, be careful not to exaggerate. Do not lie about past job responsibilities. You don't want employers to ask your old boss about things you never did!

10 Stay positive. Avoid complaining about a bad boss or job you had before. Being negative can make employers worry that you are not team player, or that you don't work well with others. And remember to smile. Smiling work well shows you are easygoing and enthusiastic.

11 Ask questions. At the end of the interview, ask specific questions about the job or company, such as "What kind of work can I expect to be doing the first year?" or "Where do you see the company five years from now?" You want to show the employer that you have done your research and that you care about working there.

12 Studies show that interviewing is not easy, but it is easier when you know what to do and what to expect. If you stay honest and professional you will get yourself one step closer to the job you want. Oh, and one more thing: don't forget to breathe!

Q1 : The end of the job interview is left for A- employers to ask question.

B- applicants to see the company.

C- employers to do research about that company.

D- applicants to ask questions.

Q2: according to the article, which of the following sentences is FALSE ?

A- you should not complain about your old job.

B- you should only know how to discuss your strengths.

C- you should let the interviewer finish what they are saying before speaking.

D- you should try to notice what the interviewer finds important.

Q3 : What is the main Idea of paragraph 3 ?

A- walk into the interview with confidence to get the position.

B- wearing suits to work is very common in business.

C- applicants should wear the right clothes to an interview.

D- jeans and T-shirts should be neat and presentable in an interview.

Q4 : which of the following statements from the article is an OPINION ?

A- To make sure you do your best, you should remember these ten tips.

Mad Anthony

in Praise of the throwaway society

J ANUARY 26, 2015

1 Yesterday, I heard someone use the phrase throwaway society, which got me thinking. Usually, the term throwaway society is used as a way of saying that we are too materialistic. It means that too much of our stuff today is poor quality instead of being built to last.

2 I see things the opposite way. The fact that we live throwaway society is not a sign that things are worse than they used to be. It is a sign that things are better than they have ever been. True, we don't repair things as much as we used to. But that's because we do not have to and don't want to, not because we can't. And it's better that way.

3 I say this because being able to replace instead of repair shows that people are wealthy. What would you rather have: an old repaired laptop or the latest model? A pair of socks with the hole patched or a fresh pair? Some people think that products today are less dependable than they used to be. But most people would rather have something with a newer design, and they vote with their wallets.

4 I think there are three reasons for this. First, lower prices. Today, because of technology, it costs less to make items, so they sell for less. When the price difference is small or when it costs more to fix an item than to replace it, consumers naturally decide to pick up a new one. Second, increased wealth. People have more money than they did in the past, and because of lower prices, they can afford more things. A tow hundred years ago, most people had one or two sets of clothes. Those clothes were valuable and expensive and formed a significant part of their budget. Now, you can get a nice sweater for a few dollars. It isn't expensive at all. When that sweater gets a hole in it, you toss it and buy a new one because you can afford to 5 Third, increased features. Thanks to advances in technology, products are getting better all the time, especially electronics. There is a good chance that the latest model includes some cool features that didn't exist when your old one was made. Now, you can get a high-definition? digital camera that is small enough to fit in your hand. You can get cell phones that have everything from email to video to GPS3. In fact, I hardly ever use my phone for an actual phone call anymore because it can do so many other wonderful things. You see, the benefit of increased features is another reason to buy something new. So throw something out today! The throwaway society shows us how good things are.

Q1 : What is the author's purpose ?

A- to give an opinion.

B- to make someone laugh.

C- to tell a story.

D- to complain.

Q2: which of the following statement from the article is Fact ?

A- I think there are three reasons for this.

B- I see things the opposite way.

C- _____

D-think...

Q3 : Which of the following sentences support the main idea of paragraph 5 ?

A- Third, increased features.

B- In fact, I hardly ever use my phone for an actual phone call anymore because it can do so many other wonderful things.

C- But that's because we do not have to and don't want to.

D- And it's better that way.

A- Now, you can get a nice sweater for dollars.

B- Some people think that products today are less dependable than they used to be.

C- Now, you can get a high-definition? digital phone that is small enough to fit in your hand.

MEMO

DATE: November 7

TO: Servers

FROM: Rayan Al Arabi, Dining Room Manager

RE: New touch-screen ordering

At Madinah Fried Chicken, we are known as a cool, trendy place for people who want some great fried chicken. We are always looking for better ways to serve our customers and make their experience unique. Next month, we will make a change so that we can really stand out and introduce touch-screen ordering which is also known as "digital dining." As an employee, you need to know about this new technology.

This is how touch-screen ordering works. Each table will have its own touch-screen computer. Customers can view the menu on the screen, including descriptions and photos. To start, the customer inserts his credit card and puts in his order by touching the screen. Then the program automatically makes suggestions for additional items to order, such as appetizers and drinks. When the customer is ready, he pushes a button to send the order directly to the computer in the kitchen. Won't that make your job as a server easier? All

A: First of all, with digital dining, customers can order quickly. We will be able to serve more customers in less time. Also, the computer program will automatically suggest additional items to order. Research shows that when this happens, customers order more. We estimate that customer bills will be 15 to 20 percent higher. With more customers ordering more items, you will earn more money in tips. In addition, you won't have to repeat the same information over and over like a robot. Finally, customers can't blame you for errors in their order—they place their orders themselves! Won't that be nice?

Q: Will customers really want to do their own ordering?

A: Yes, I think that most of our customers will love it! If a diner prefers the traditional service, we will experience unique. Next month, we will make a change so that we can really stand out and introduce touch-screen ordering which is also known as "digital dining." As an employee, you need to know about this new technology.

This is how touch-screen ordering works. Each table will have its own touch-screen computer. Customers can view the menu on the screen, including descriptions and photos. To start, the customer inserts his credit card and puts in his order by touching the screen. Then the program automatically makes suggestions for additional items to order, such as appetizers and drinks. When the customer is ready, he pushes a button to send the order directly to the computer in the kitchen. Won't that make your job as a server easier? All you have to do is bring the food to the table when it's ready! Finally, paying the bill is quick and easy because the customer can do it himself. This exciting new technology will improve our customers' dining experience and increase your tips!

Now you may want to know how this change will affect you. Maybe you are afraid of losing your job. Let me assure you, you won't. In fact, you will be able to serve more customers every night! These high-tech computers not only look cool, they decrease the number of tasks you have to do. Hopefully, this means that you can serve more tables without feeling stressed!

Here are some questions and answers.
Q: What are the benefits for me as a server?
A: First of all, with digital dining, customers can order quickly. We will be able to serve more customers in less time. Also, the computer program will automatically suggest additional items to order. Research shows that when this happens, customers order more. We estimate that customer bills will be 15 to 20 percent higher. With more customers ordering more items, you will earn more money in tips. In addition, you won't have to repeat the same information over and over like a robot. Finally, customers can't blame you for errors in their order—they place their orders themselves! Won't that be nice?

Q: Will customers really want to do their own ordering?
A: Yes, I think that most of our customers will love it! If a diner prefers the traditional service, we will provide it. But these monitors will be so much fun that everyone will want to use them! The photographs will be fantastic and the descriptions will be mouth-watering. As you know, most of our customers are tech-savvy, and they enjoy interacting with the latest gadgets!

Q: What other features will these touch-screens have?
A: They'll have entertaining games and high-speed Internet access. Customers can send messages to friends and post photos of themselves at the table.

We will be having an employee training session next Tuesday from 9:30-11:00 a.m. to show you how digital dining works. I look forward to presenting this fabulous new system to you!

Question 4 :

According to the article, which of the following sentences is TRUE?

Choose the best answer for each item.

BUSINESS

A Family Business

The Bancroft family was an interesting example. For 100 years, the Bancroft family owned The Wall Street Journal. It is one of the most famous newspapers in the United States. But there were some family problems. They did not communicate well, and they disagreed about how to run the paper and what they could do to grow it more in global lands. The younger family members wanted the business to be more modern. The older members thought the history of the paper was more important than anything else. In addition, the family let people outside of the family manage the newspaper. They did not take part in many important decisions. In 2007, all 11 of the Bancroft family members agreed to sell the company. Although the members had shared several generations of the business, they had to sell it. In the end, many of their family members were sad.

They had to think about passing down their business to the next generation, but this was not an easy task. Good communication and preparation. Good communication is a key to success. All employees should have clear roles. Family members should have clear roles. Also, they should have a plan for the future. The older members of the family had to be flexible. They had to be open to change. They had to be willing to let go of their control. They had to be willing to let others manage their business.

Question No. 2

What is the best topic sentence for the following paragraph?

The U.S. Center for Disease Control and Prevention says that when flu vaccines are taken early enough, they can prevent 70 percent to 90 percent of infections in healthy people under age 65. However, each year there are new, unknown viruses. Therefore, scientists must develop new vaccines each year. It can take 6 months to a year to develop these vaccines. Flu vaccinations are therefore recommended before the flu season starts.

- Only people under the age of 65 get a flu vaccine before the flu season starts
- Many people get a flu vaccine before the flu season starts
- 70-90 percent of people get a flu vaccine 6 months before the flu season starts
- Many people get a flu vaccine 6 months before the flu season starts

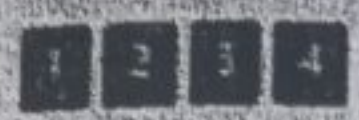

Choose the best answer for each item:

BUSINESS

Running a Family Business

The Bancroft family was an interesting example for its time. The Bancroft family owned The Wall Street Journal. It was one of the most famous companies in the United States. But there were many family problems. They did not communicate well and they disagreed about everything. One person said that they couldn't even agree on what to do for lunch! The younger family members wanted the business to be more profitable. The older members thought the quality of the paper was more important than making more money. In addition, the family let people outside of the family manage the newspaper. They all took part in many important business deals. In 1987, all 13 of the Bancroft family members agreed to sell the company. Although the owners had tested several potential buyers, they eventually had to sell the company because they did not manage it well. In the end, many of their family members were disappointed.

They talked about selling down their business to the next generation, but this was not a good idea. They had to find another way to run the business. They had to find a way to run the business that would be profitable and that would be good for the family. They had to find a way to run the business that would be profitable and that would be good for the family. They had to find a way to run the business that would be profitable and that would be good for the family.

Question 4 :

According to the article, which of the following sentences...

BUSINESS
Family Business

The Bancroft family was an interesting example. For 100 years, the Bancroft family owned The Wall Street Journal. It is one of the most famous newspapers in the United States. But there were some family problems. They did not communicate well, and they disagreed about how things should be done. One person said that they could not agree on where to go for lunch. The younger family members wanted the business to be more successful. The older members thought the family of the paper was more important than the business. In addition, the family let people outside of the family manage the newspaper. They did not take part in many important decisions. In 2007, all 11 of the Bancroft family members agreed to sell the company. Although the business had lasted several generations, the Bancrofts eventually had to sell the company because they did not manage it well. In the end, many of their family members were disappointed.

Many families have a hard time passing down their business to the next generation, but this is not always a bad thing. Some families do not pass on their business. Some families do not have clear rules about how the business should be run. Some families do not have clear roles for each member. Some families do not have clear goals for the business. Some families do not have clear communication. Some families do not have clear financial records. Some families do not have clear succession plans. Some families do not have clear exit strategies. Some families do not have clear legal documents. Some families do not have clear relationships with other family members. Some families do not have clear relationships with employees. Some families do not have clear relationships with customers. Some families do not have clear relationships with suppliers. Some families do not have clear relationships with competitors. Some families do not have clear relationships with the community. Some families do not have clear relationships with the government. Some families do not have clear relationships with the media. BUSINESS

The Bancroft family is an interesting example. For 165 years, the Bancroft family owned The Wall Street Journal. It is one of the most famous newspapers in the United States. But there were many family problems. They did not communicate well, and they disagreed about many things. One person said that they couldn't even agree on where to go for lunch! The younger family members wanted the business to be more profitable. The older members thought the quality of the paper was more important than making money. In addition, the family let people outside of the family manage the newspaper. They did not take part in many important business decisions. Finally, in 2007, all 33 of the Bancroft family owners agreed to sell the company. Although the business had lasted several generations, the Bancrofts eventually had to sell their company because they did not manage it well. In the end, many of their family relationships suffered.

Many families dream of passing down their businesses to the next generation, but this requires careful planning and preparation. Good management is a key to success. All employees, especially family members, need to have clear responsibilities. Family business owners should think about how decisions are made. Also, they should be realistic about the dreams and goals of the younger generation. Strong family ties are the most important reason for family businesses to be successful. But to succeed for more than one generation, families need to manage their businesses carefully.

Technology is great. However, there are some technologies that drive me crazy! Recently, I needed to talk to a bank representative, so I called them. Of course, I didn't get to talk to a real person. Instead, an automated recording asked me a lot of questions. After a few minutes the machine hung up on me. Arrrrrrghh! I called back, the recording said, "We're sorry, all agents are busy assisting other customers. We are sorry we can't take your call." I had to wait for half an hour to talk to a real person. While I was on hold, every 30 seconds a recording played an advertisement. I was annoyed and angry. I felt so frustrated!

A self-service checkout system in the supermarket also drives me crazy! With this new device, I can buy my groceries myself instead of waiting in a checkout line. However, for some strange reason, these systems seem to hate me. They never work well, and when I use them, everyone looks at me as if I'm an idiot. I wish we could go back to the good old days when there were real people to help us.

They have new technology at my favorite restaurant. It is really stressful! Each table has its own computer monitor with a touch screen. I can view the menu on the monitor, including descriptions of the dishes. I insert my bank card and put in my order by touching the screen. My order is sent directly to the kitchen. This sounds good, however, last week, when my food came, it was not what I ordered. I was furious!

Yesterday, I tried to register online for my second-year classes at university which begins next month. Unfortunately, the website didn't work! Some students who were in my class last year went to the campus to register. I live very far from the university, so I kept trying to register online. Now all the classes I want are full. I don't know who to blame.

Speaking to a machine is very frustrating. I think I would have been happier living a hundred years ago, before we had all of this timesaving, self-service technology. Companies think that all of this new technology saves us time, but actually it wastes it. I believe people do a better job, and if you have a problem, you can talk to them about it. I hope companies realize this and change their systems.

MEMO

DATE: November 7
TO: Servers
FROM: Rayan Al Arabi, Dining Room Manager
RE: New touch-screen ordering

At Madinah Fried Chicken, we are known as a cool, trendy place for people who want some great fried chicken. We are always looking for better ways to serve our customers and make their experience unique. Next month, we will make a change so that we can really stand out and introduce touch-screen ordering which is also known as "digital dining." As an employee, you need to know about this new technology.

This is how touch-screen ordering works. Each table will have its own touch-screen computer. Customers can view the menu on the screen, including descriptions and photos. To start, the customer inserts his credit card and puts in his order by touching the screen. Then the program automatically makes suggestions for additional items to order, such as appetizers and drinks. When the customer is ready, he pushes a button to send the order directly to the computer in the kitchen. Won't that make your job as a server easier? All

A: First of all, with digital dining, customers can order quickly. We will be able to serve more customers in less time. Also, the computer program will automatically suggest additional items to order. Research shows that when this happens, customers order more. We estimate that customer bills will be 15 to 20 percent higher. With more customers ordering more items, you will earn more money in tips. In addition, you won't have to repeat the same information over and over like a robot. Finally, customers can't blame you for errors in their order—they place their orders themselves! Won't that be nice?

Q: Will customers really want to do their own ordering?

A: Yes, I think that most of our customers will love it! If a diner prefers the traditional service, we will experience unique. Next month, we will make a change so that we can really stand out and introduce touch-screen ordering which is also known as "digital dining." As an employee, you need to know about this new technology.

This is how touch-screen ordering works. Each table will have its own touch-screen computer. Customers can view the menu on the screen, including descriptions and photos. To start, the customer inserts his credit card and puts in his order by touching the screen. Then the program automatically makes suggestions for additional items to order, such as appetizers and drinks. When the customer is ready, he pushes a button to send the order directly to the computer in the kitchen. Won't that make your job as a server easier? All you have to do is bring the food to the table when it's ready! Finally, paying the bill is quick and easy because the customer can do it himself. This exciting new technology will improve our customers' dining experience and increase your tips!

Now you may want to know how this change will affect you. Maybe you are afraid of losing your job. Let me assure you, you won't. In fact, you will be able to serve more customers every night! These high-tech computers not only look cool, they decrease the number of tasks you have to do. Hopefully, this means that you can serve more tables without feeling stressed!

Here are some questions and answers.

will automatically suggest additional items to order. Research shows that when this happens, customers order more. We estimate that customer bills will be 15 to 20 percent higher. With more customers ordering more items, you will earn more money in tips. In addition, you won't have to repeat the same information over and over like a robot. Finally, customers can't blame you for errors in their order—they place their orders themselves! Won't that be nice?

Q: Will customers really want to do their own ordering?

A: Yes, I think that most of our customers will love it! If a diner prefers the traditional service, we will provide it. But these monitors will be so much fun that everyone will want to use them! The photographs will be fantastic and the descriptions will be mouth-watering. As you know, most of our customers are tech-savvy, and they enjoy interacting with the latest gadgets!

Q: What other features will these touch-screens have?

A: They'll have entertaining games and high-speed Internet access. Customers can send messages to friends and post photos of themselves at the table.

We will be having an employee training session next Tuesday from 9:30-11:00 a.m. to show you how digital dining works. I look forward to presenting this fabulous new system to you!

of throwing them away. As consumers, we should think about how to fix something to make it last. Furthermore, we need to rethink our attitudes about spending. Repairing our possessions and changing our spending habits may reduce the amount of trash and take care of the environment.

⁴ Some people support the idea of throwing things away. They say that because of technology, it costs less to make items, so they sell for less. Sometimes it costs more to fix an item than to replace it. Therefore, consumers naturally decide to pick up a new one. You can buy a new phone cheaply, so why fix your old one? They also say that thanks to advances in technology, products are getting better and cheaper all the time, especially electronics. The benefit of increased features makes people prefer to buy something new. Therefore, throwing things away is preferred by some people.

⁵ People are throwing out more trash than ever before. I live in the United States, where the amount of trash per person nearly doubled from 1960 to 2000. However, people have more money than they did in the past, and products are cheaper. I think there is no problem with throwing away things. However, it is better if these things are recycled, or given to poor people. This way we can look after the environment and buy the newest smartphones!

Think Before You Toss

by Ted Carson

¹ Nowadays, people throw things away a lot more than they used to. In our modern world, when something wears out, we throw it away and buy a replacement. If a table is broken or a thobe or abaya is torn, you throw it away. In the past, people would repair broken things, not many people do this anymore. The problem is that countries around the world have growing mountains of trash because people are throwing out more trash than ever before. However, some people think that it is a good thing that we live in a throwaway society.

² For some people, our appetite for new products contributes to the problem. We are addicted to buying new things. As consumers, we want the latest clothes, the best TVs, and cell phones with the newest features. Companies tell us to buy, buy and buy. Advertisements persuade us that newer is better and that we will be happier with the latest products. The result is that we throw away useful possessions to make room for new ones. In the U.S., when consumers get rid of electronics, 80 percent of them go to a dump. Only about 18 percent of electronics are recycled. This is a very low percentage.

of throwing them away. Furthermore, we need to think about how to reduce our spending. Repairing our possessions instead of buying new ones and taking care of them

⁴ Some people say that it is less expensive to buy new things than to repair old ones. They say that it costs more to repair something than to buy a new one. You can't always fix your old one. Therefore, consumers buy new things. Advances in technology have made things cheaper and newer is better. Therefore, consumers buy new things. daughters. There are many reasons why family businesses fail. One of the biggest reasons is that the family members fight, another is because of changing times.

² The Dassler family is an interesting example. Rudolf and Adolf (Adi) Dassler were famous brothers from Germany. They owned a shoe company called Dassler Brothers Shoe Factory. They did not communicate well, and they disagreed about many things. In 1948, the brothers stopped working together and started their own companies. Rudolf Dassler called his company Puma, and Adi Dassler called his company Adidas. Today, Puma and Adidas are successful companies, but the Dassler's family relationships suffered.

MONDAY, APRIL 14

¹ Technology is great. However, there are some technologies that drive me crazy! Recently, I spoke to my bank, so I called them. Of course, I didn't get to talk to a real person. Instead, an auto voice recording asked me a lot of questions. After a few minutes the machine hung up on me. Arr! When I called back, the recording said, "We're sorry, all agents are busy assisting other customers unable to take your call." I had to wait for half an hour to talk to a real person. While I was on hold for few minutes a recording played an advertisement. I was annoyed and angry. I felt so frustrated!

² The new self-service checkout system in the supermarket also drives me crazy! With this new device I scan my groceries myself instead of waiting in a checkout line. However, for some strange reason machines seem to hate me. They never work well, and when I use them, everyone looks at me as if I'm idiot. I wish we could go back to the good old days when there were real people to help us.

³ Now they have new technology at my favorite restaurant. It is really stressful! Each table has tabletop computer monitor with a touch screen. I can view the menu on the monitor, including descriptions and photos. I insert my bank card and put in my order by touching the screen. My order is sent direct computer in the kitchen. This sounds good, however, last week, when my food came, it was not ordered. I was furious!

⁴ Yesterday, I tried to register online for my second-year classes at university which began next semester. However, the website didn't work! Some students who were in my class last year went to the registrar. I live very far from the university, so I kept trying to register online. Now all the classes I need are full. I don't know who to blame.

⁵ Speaking to a machine is very frustrating. I think I would have been happier living a hundred years ago. This was before we had all of this time-saving, self-service technology. Companies think that all of technology saves us time, but actually it wastes it. I believe people do a better job, and if you have problems, you can talk to them about it. I hope companies realize this and change their errors.

¹ Nowadays, people throw things away a lot more than they used to. In our modern world, when something wears out, we throw it away and buy a replacement. If a table is broken or a thobe or abaya is torn, you throw it away. In the past, people would repair broken things, not many people do this anymore. The problem is that countries around the world have growing mountains of trash because people are throwing out more trash than ever before. However, some people think that it is a good thing that we live in a throwaway society.

² For some people, our appetite for new products contributes to the problem. We are addicted to buying new things. As consumers, we want the latest clothes, the best TVs, and cell phones with the newest features. Companies tell us to buy, buy and buy. Advertisements persuade us that newer is better and that we will be happier with the latest products. The result is that we throw away useful possessions to make room for new ones. In the U.S., when consumers get rid of electronics, 80 percent of them go to a dump. Only about 18 percent of electronics are recycled. This is a very low percentage.

³ Some people say that to lessen the amount of trash and to protect the environment we should recycle materials such as paper, plastic, and glass. Moreover, we need to repair our possessions instead of throwing them away. Furthermore, we need to think about how to reduce our spending. Repairing our possessions instead of buying new ones and taking care of them

⁴ Some people say that it is less expensive to buy new things than to repair old ones. They say that it costs more to repair something than to buy a new one. You can't always fix your old one. Therefore, consumers buy new things. Advances in technology have made things cheaper and newer is better. Therefore, consumers buy new things. RE: New touch-screen ordering

At Malindi Fried Chicken, we are known as a cool, trendy place for people who want some great fried chicken. We are always looking for better ways to serve our customers and make their experience unique. Next month, we will make a change so that we can really stand out and introduce touch-screen ordering, which is also known as "digital dining." As an employee, you need to know about this new technology.

This is how touch-screen ordering works. Each table will have its own touch-screen computer. Customers can view the menu on the screen, including descriptions and photos. To start, the customer inserts his credit card and puts in his order by touching the screen. Then the program automatically makes suggestions for additional items to order, such as appetizers and drinks. When the customer is ready, he pushes a button to send the order directly to the computer in the kitchen. That's that: make your job as a server easier! All

A. First of all, with digital dining, customers can order quickly. We will be able to serve faster customers in less time. Also, the computer program will automatically suggest additional items to order. Research shows that when this happens, customers order more. We estimate that customer bills will be 15 to 20 percent higher. With more customers ordering more items, you will make more money in tips. In addition, you won't have to repeat the same information over and over like a robot. Finally, customers can't blame you for errors in their order—they place their orders themselves! Won't that be nice?

Q: Will customers really want to do their own ordering?

A: Yes, I think that most of our customers will love it! If a diner prefers the traditional service, he will

Family Business

The Bancroft family is an interesting example. For 105 years, the Bancroft family owned The Wall Street Journal. It is one of the most famous newspapers in the United States. But there were many family problems. They did not communicate well, and they disagreed about many things. One person said that they couldn't agree on where to go for lunch! The younger family members wanted the business to be more profitable. The older members thought the stability of the paper was more important than making money. In addition, the family let people outside of the family manage the newspaper. They did not take part in many important decisions. Finally, in 2007, all 33 of the Bancroft family owners agreed to sell the company, although the business had lasted several generations, the Bancrofts eventually had to sell their company because they did not manage it well. In the end, many of their family relationships suffered.

Many families dream of passing down their businesses to the next generation, but this requires careful planning and preparation. Good management is a key to success. All employees, especially family members, need to have clear responsibilities. Family business owners should think about how decisions are made. Also, they should be realistic about the dreams and goals of the younger generation. Strong family ties are the most important reason for family businesses to be successful. But to succeed for more than one generation, families need to manage their businesses carefully.

Which of the following statements from the article is an OPINION?

- Only about 18 percent of electronics are recycled. (Paragraph 2)
- I live in the United States, where the amount of trash per person has nearly doubled from 1960 to 2000. (Paragraph 5)
- In the U.S., when consumers get rid of electronics, 80 percent of them go to a dump. (Paragraph 2)
- However, it is better if these things are recycled, or given to poor people. (Paragraph 5)

Question 3:

Which of the following sentences supports the main idea of paragraph 4?

- Therefore, consumers naturally decide to pick up used ones.
- Therefore, throwing things away is preferred by some people.
- Sometimes it costs more to fix an item than to replace it.
- Some people support the idea of throwing things away.

Question 4:

According to the article, which of the following sentences is TRUE?

- Advertisements persuade us to repair our useful possessions.

1 Nowadays, people throw things away a lot more than they used to. In our modern world, when something wears out, we throw it away and buy a replacement. If a table is broken or a thobe or abaya is torn, you throw it away. In the past, people would repair broken things, not many people do this anymore. The problem is that countries around the world have growing mountains of trash because people are throwing out more trash than ever before. However, some people think that it is a good thing that we live in a throwaway society.

For some people, our appetite for new products contributes to the problem. We are addicted to buying new things. As consumers, we want the latest features. Companies tell us to buy, buy and buy. Advertisements persuade us that newer is better and that we will be happier with the latest. The result is that we throw away useful things to make room for new ones. In the U.S., consumers get rid of electronics, 80 percent of them go to a dump. Only about 18 percent of electronics are recycled. This is a very low percentage.

that to lessen the amount of trash in our environment we should recycle more plastic and glass.

5 People are throwing away more trash than ever before. I live in the United States, where the amount of trash per person has nearly doubled from 1960 to 2000. However, in the past, as there is no problem with recycling, it is better to repair things than to throw them away. However, it is better to repair things than to throw them away. MEMO

 TO: Servers
 FROM: Rayan Al Arabi, Dining Room Manager
 RE: New touch-screen ordering

At Madinah Fried Chicken, we are known as a cool, trendy place for people who want some great fried chicken. We are always looking for better ways to serve our customers and make their experience unique. Next month, we will make a change so that we can really stand out and introduce touch-screen ordering which is also known as "digital dining." As an employee, you need to know about this new technology.

This is how touch-screen ordering works. Each table will have its own touch-screen computer. Customers can view the menu on the screen, including descriptions and photos. To start, the customer inserts his credit card and puts in his order by touching the screen. Then the program automatically makes suggestions for additional items to order, such as appetizers and drinks. When the customer is ready, he pushes a button to send the order directly to the computer in the kitchen. Won't that make your job as a server easier? All you have to do is bring the food to the table when it's ready! Finally, paying the bill is quick and easy because the customer can do it himself. This exciting new technology will improve our customers' dining experience and increase your tips!

Now you may want to know how this change will affect you. Maybe you are afraid of losing your job. Let me assure you: you won't. In fact, you will be able to serve more customers every night! These touch-screen computers not only look cool, they are fast. First of all, with digital dining, customers can order quickly. We will be able to serve more customers in less time. Also, the computer program will automatically suggest additional items to order. Research shows that when this happens, customers order more. We estimate that customer bills will be 15 to 20 percent higher. With more customers ordering more items, you will earn more money in tips. In addition, you won't have to repeat the same information over and over like a robot. Finally, customers can't blame you for errors in their order—they place their orders themselves! Won't that be nice?

Q: Will customers really want to do their own ordering?

A: Yes, I think that most of our customers will love it! If a diner prefers the traditional service, we will provide it. But these monitors will be so much fun that everyone will want to use them! The photographs will be fantastic and the descriptions will be mouth-watering. As you know, most of our customers are tech-savvy, and they enjoy interacting with the latest gadgets!

Q: What other features will these touch-screens have?

The Challenge of Running a Family Business

In the United States, families own about 85 percent of all businesses. However, less than 30 percent of these companies last more than 20 years. Many family businesses fail, and the owners can't pass them on to their sons and daughters. Why is it so difficult for family businesses to survive?

Times may be changing. Fifty years ago, most families owned local grocery stores. Today, small family-owned stores cannot compete with large supermarket chains. Today, Mom and Pop stores are a thing of the past. Modern life is another challenge in a family business. A successful company requires hard work and long hours. Younger generations may not want this lifestyle. They may want more freedom. In addition, sons and daughters may not have the same enthusiasm for the business as their parents.

A successful family business depends on the strengths and talents of its members. However, families often ignore their weaknesses and personal differences in the workplace. Many families do not communicate well, and they are not good at solving problems together. These challenges often cause businesses to fail. According to Randel Carlock, these problems are common. He says, "Being part of a family can be difficult. Being part of a family business is even more difficult." Love is important in a family, but love is not enough to run a family business. The business must achieve financial

Trouble with Technology

by David Palmer

MONDAY, APRIL 14

¹ Technology is great. However, there are some technologies that drive me crazy! Recently, I tried to speak to my bank, so I called them. Of course, I didn't get to talk to a real person. Instead, an auto voice recording asked me a lot of questions. After a few minutes the machine hung up on me. Arrrr! When I called back, the recording said, "We're sorry, all agents are busy assisting other customers. We're unable to take your call." I had to wait for half an hour to talk to a real person. While I was on hold for a few minutes a recording played an advertisement. I was annoyed and angry. I felt so frustrated!

² The new self-service checkout system in the supermarket also drives me crazy! With this new device I can scan my groceries myself instead of waiting in a checkout line. However, for some strange reason the machines seem to hate me. They never work well, and when I use them, everyone looks at me as if I'm an idiot. I wish we could go back to the good old days when there were real people to help us.

³ Now they have new technology at my favorite restaurant. It is really stressful! Each table has a tabletop computer monitor with a touch screen. I can view the menu on the monitor, including descriptions and photos. I insert my bank card and put in my order by touching the screen. My order is sent direct

At Madinah Fried Chicken, we are known as a cool, trendy place for people who want some great fried chicken. We are always looking for better ways to serve our customers and make their experience unique. Next month, we will make a change so that we can really stand out and introduce touch-screen ordering which is also known as "digital dining." As an employee, you need to know about this new technology.

This is how touch-screen ordering works. Each table will have its own touch-screen computer. Customers can view the menu on the screen, including descriptions and photos. To start, the customer inserts his credit card and puts in his order by touching the screen. Then the program automatically makes suggestions for additional items to order, such as appetizers and drinks. When the customer is ready, he pushes a button to send the order directly to the computer in the kitchen. Won't that make your job as a server easier? All

A: First of all, with digital dining, customers can order quickly. We will be able to serve more customers in less time. Also, the computer program will automatically suggest additional items to order. Research shows that when this happens, customers order more. We estimate that customer bills will be 15 to 20 percent higher. With more customers ordering more items, you will earn more money in tips. In addition, you won't have to repeat the same information over and over like a robot. Finally, customers can't blame you for errors in their order—they place their orders themselves! Won't that be nice?

Q: Will customers really want to do their own ordering?

APRIL 14

Technology is great. However, there are some technologies that drive me crazy! Recently, I needed to go to my bank, so I called them. Of course, I didn't get to talk to a real person. Instead, an automated recording asked me a lot of questions. After a few minutes the machine hung up on me. Arrrrrrghh! I called back, the recording said, "We're sorry, all agents are busy assisting other customers. We are sorry to take your call." I had to wait for half an hour to talk to a real person. While I was on hold, every 30 seconds a recording played an advertisement. I was annoyed and angry. I felt so frustrated!

A self-service checkout system in the supermarket also drives me crazy! With this new device, I can buy my groceries myself instead of waiting in a checkout line. However, for some strange reason, these systems seem to hate me. They never work well, and when I use them, everyone looks at me as if I'm an idiot. I wish we could go back to the good old days when there were real people to help us.

They have new technology at my favorite restaurant. It is really stressful! Each table has its own computer monitor with a touch screen. I can view the menu on the monitor, including descriptions of the dishes. I insert my bank card and put in my order by touching the screen. My order is sent directly to the kitchen. This sounds good, however, last week, when my food came, it was not what I ordered. I was furious!

Yesterday, I tried to register online for my second-year classes at university which begins next month. Unfortunately, the website didn't work! Some students who were in my class last year went to the campus to register. I live very far from the university, so I kept trying to register online. Now all the classes I want are full. I don't know who to blame.

Speaking to a machine is very frustrating. I think I would have been happier living a hundred years ago, before we had all of this timesaving, self-service technology. Companies think that all of this new technology saves us time, but actually it wastes it. I believe people do a better job, and if you have a problem, you can talk to them about it. I hope companies realize this and change their systems.

vaccinations, if needed. There is a medical clinic at the airport for sick pilgrims. For pilgrims travelling within Saudi Arabia, officials check vaccination records and make sure people are up to date on all required vaccines.

“Another important Saudi strategy is to use technology to track the outbreak of diseases. With many new technologies, experts are able to immediately report a person with a disease. That information quickly goes to all health officials, and organizers can take steps to control the outbreak. During a mass gathering, instant reporting is extremely important. During the 2009 Hajj, there was a global outbreak of the H1N1 bird flu pandemic. Hajj organizers used technology to track and report cases of the flu. They used a cell phone system to collect information, and the Internet to report it instantly. Organizers also worked with the World Health Organization (WHO) to use rapid testing and to quarantine infected pilgrims. They were able to control the outbreak and prevent its spread to thousands of pilgrims.

“It seems that the field of health and mass gatherings is growing. This is a very new ingredient in medicine, and international cooperation is a key ingredient. The Saudi Ministry of Health has recently created a new diploma course in Mass Gathering and Disaster Medicine, based in Jeddah. The goal is to develop an international center for sharing knowledge. Khalid Mujeeb from the Ministry of Health said that “multinational approaches to public health challenges are likely to become major factors in global health diplomacy and bringing the West a little closer to the East.” International cooperation will help limit the spread of disease, and lead to better health around the world.

able to serve more customers every night. These high-tech computers not only look cool, they decrease the number of tasks you have to do. Hopefully, this means that you can serve more tables without feeling stressed!

There are some questions and answers:

Q: What are the benefits for me as a server?

A: They have entertaining games and high-speed internet access. Customers can send messages to friends and post photos of themselves at the table.

We will be having an employee training session next Tuesday from 9:30-11:00 a.m. to show you how digital dining works. I look forward to presenting this fabulous new system to you.

- The training session will be next Tuesday from 9:30-11:00 a.m.
- The company is always looking for better ways to serve the customers.
- They estimate that customers' bills will be 15 - 20 % lower.
- Most of their customers will enjoy interacting with the latest technology.

experience unique. Next month, we will make a change so that we can really stand out and introduce touch-screen ordering which is also known as "digital dining." As an employee, you need to know about this new technology.

This is how touch-screen ordering works. Each table will have its own touch-screen computer. Customers can view the menu on the screen, including descriptions and photos. To start, the customer inserts his credit card and puts in his order by touching the screen. Then the program automatically makes suggestions for additional items to order, such as appetizers and drinks. When the customer is ready, he pushes a button to send the order directly to the computer in the kitchen. Won't that make your job as a server easier? All will automatically suggest additional items to order. Research shows that when this happens, customers order more. We estimate that customer bills will be 15 to 20 percent higher. With more customers ordering more items, you will earn more money in tips. In addition, you won't have to repeat the same information over and over like a robot. Finally, customers can't blame you for errors in their order—they place their orders themselves! Won't that be nice?

Q: Will customers really want to do their own ordering?

A: Yes, I think that most of our customers will love it. If a diner prefers the traditional service, we will provide it. But these monitors will be so much fun

Question 3 :

Which of the following statements from the memo is an OPINION?

- But these monitors will be so much fun that everyone will love them! (Paragraph 5)
- Each table will have its own touch-screen computer. (Paragraph 4)
- Customers can send messages to friends and post photos at the table. (Paragraph 5)

Question No. 1

Which of the following sentences uses a descriptive adjective?

- I saw an accident on the way to work this morning.
- I bought my brother a beautiful watch for his graduation.
- I ate a meal at a restaurant downtown.
- I met my friend at the park on Sultana Street.

Question No. 1

Read the introductory paragraph to an opinion essay below. Which of the following is the best thesis statement for the essay?

With new technology, advertising can be deceptive. For example, many beauty ads show women with perfect skin and hair. In reality, their photos have been "touched up" by computer software programs. Men, too, are shown as very muscular and strong, when the reality may be quite different. Men and women both age naturally, but advertisements show a different kind of person—one who never gets old.

- I think computer software programs are very innovative.
- I think advertising should show people of different ages, shapes, and sizes, not just young people.
- I think changing the way someone looks in a photo is outdated.
- With new technology, advertising can be deceptive. For example, many beauty ads show women with perfect skin and hair.

Question No. 2

Which of the following sentences uses descriptive adjectives?

- I don't like to eat food that has a lot of sugar.
- There was a group of people in the bank this morning.
- I went to the beach in Yanbu with my friend.
- I bought my son an expensive, new phone.

Question No. 1

Read the introductory paragraph to an opinion essay below. Which of the following is the best thesis statement for the essay?

While watching my son's baseball game the other night, I noticed something new around the fence surrounding the field. There was a huge advertisement for a popular brand of soda. I was absolutely shocked! How could an advertisement for junk food be placed in view of all of the children and parents? I realize now that this huge corporation is giving money to my son's school, but at what cost?

- I think it's wonderful that companies are paying for sports programs.
- While watching my son's baseball game the other night, I noticed something new around the fence surrounding the field.
- I think soda advertisements are very funny.
- Advertisements for unhealthy food or drinks should not be on school property.
