I- Read the following text then choose the correct answer a, b, c, or d: (60 marks)

The virus and the bacterium are tiny to be seen by the naked eye, they can cause similar symptoms and are often spread in the same way. A bacterium is a single complex cell. It can survive on its own, inside or outside the body. This allows bacteria to live in many places- soil, water, plants and the human body. Most bacteria aren't harmful; we have many bacteria on and inside our body, especially in the gut to help digest food. On the other hand, viruses are smaller and aren't cells. Unlike bacteria, they need a host such as a human or an animal to multiply. Viruses only grow and reproduce inside the host cells they infect. Their life involves the hijacking of the biochemical activities of a living cell. Viruses and bacteria differ in how they cause infections. As the names suggest, viruses cause viral infections, whereas bacteria cause bacterial infections. Viruses infect a host cell and then multiply by the thousands, leaving the host and infecting other cells of the body. Diseases caused by a viral infection include influenza, common cold, flu, AIDS and Covid-19. Bacteria, on the other hand, have a more varied operation and will often infect when the right opportunity arises. Bacterial infections include pneumonia, strep throat, ear infection and food poisoning.

Today, more and more people in Syria are using computers for activities at home, at school or at work. Such is the demand that the government launched a scheme to allow Syrians to purchase them more easily. Many people are using computers for all sorts of things – writing letters, searching the Internet or just playing games. It is a great thing that Syria has embraced modern technology so successfully.

In my opinion, the main disadvantage is that people may spend so much time on their computers that they see less of their friends and family. Children who spend too long playing computer games may become unsociable and forget how to communicate normally with other people. Another result of people spending too much time at their computers is that their health suffers. Sitting for long periods of time can hurt your eyes, cause headaches, or damage your hands and arms. In some cases this means that people can't do their jobs properly. There is no doubt that computers are here to stay. Some jobs and many leisure activities would be impossible without them, but we should be aware of the possible dangers of spending too much time at our computers.

7. Syrian people are using computers at work only.
8. The Syrian government has made some efforts to enable people buying computers easily.
9. Syria has failed in adopting the new technology.
10. Overusing computers makes people more sociable.
11. Spending too much time on computers may cause medical problems.
12. It's certain that we can't do many tasks without computers.

Being a good citizen doesn't stop at the exchange of rights and duties, it requires a lot of civilized behavior, and responsible acts. All the members of our community have to cooperate. By cooperating, simple acts and easy behavior can help us improve our level of life. As citizens, and students in particular, all we have to do are the steps below:

- Start with your own home, clean it regularly, and take care of your front door area.
- Don't litter, or throw trash in the street.
- Respect your school. It is not yours; you are only borrowing it temporarily.
- Being a citizen is a source of pride. Don't try to ignore your origins in front of foreigners.
- If you don't vote, who will? A simple act can place the right person in the right place.
- In emergencies, don't be afraid. Help the people in need.

When you become a parent, teach this to your children. Citizenship starts from childhood, and only ends by the time you die. It's only by practicing those really simple acts that our daily life can get better.

- Good citizens are only the ones who practice their rights and duties.
- When the members of the community work together, their life gets more complicated.

The immune system has a vital role since it protects your body from harmful substances, germs and cell changes that could make you ill. It is made up of various organs, cells and proteins. As long as your immune system is running smoothly, you don't notice that it's there. But if it stops working properly, you get ill. Germs that your body has never encountered before are also likely to make you ill. Without an immune system, we would have no way to fight harmful things that enter our body from the outside or harmful changes that occur inside our body.

The immune system can fight and remove disease-causing germs (pathogens) like bacteria, viruses, parasites or fungi, and it can recognize and neutralize harmful substances from the environment. It can be activated by a lot of different things that the body doesn't recognise as its own. These are called antigens. When these antigens attach to special receptors on the immune cells, a whole series of processes are triggered in the body. Once the body has come into contact with a disease-causing germ for the first time, it usually stores information about the germ and how to fight it. Then, if it comes into contact with the germ again, it recognises the germ straight away and can start fighting it faster.

Not all cultures share the same beliefs and values about what is normal or socially acceptable. These differences can cause severe culture shocks. Once a person accepts the difference and acknowledges it, the process of integration becomes easier. Here are some examples of situations that can cause food culture shock: in some Chinese restaurants, eating chicken feet is common. Although not an everyday food item, horse meat and blood sausage are normal in France. Some restaurants in ancient culture specialised in dog meat dishes. However, recently in Cambodia, animal rights activists, have gained a small victory in their effort to end the trade in dog meat. To overcome food culture shock, here are some tips: first, expect food to be different. Second, we don't have to eat strange things quickly. Third, use good judgement and do not insult people by making disgusted facial expressions.

- All cultures around the world have the same beliefs.
- Horse meat is considered a daily meal in France.
- Animal rights activists in Cambodia failed to apply a law against the dog meat trade.
