A college is a wonderful place. It is like a town or a small city in several ways. One way is population. In the United States, many colleges and universities have several thousand students. In other ways, too, a modern college is like a small city.

Like a city, many colleges have everything for student life. A dormitory is a room or building where students live. This is also called an apartment building. There are places to eat: dining rooms, coffee shops, and snack bars. There is a student store, with food, clothes, and computers. There is a health center, with doctors and dentists. There is often a shuttle for students. (A shuttle is a bus. It takes students from one place to another.)

Like any city, a college campus has entertainment. There is often a radio station or theater. There is a sports center, where students exercise: they run, swim, or play games. They watch sports, too. There are student clubs, where students learn more about computers, poetry, or science, for example. There is a student art gallery.

Of course, students go to college for an education. But learning happens in many places, not only a classroom. One important place is the learning resources center. This is like a library, but it also has computers and tutors. (A tutor is a teacher who helps one student with questions or problems.) Another important place is the ESL (English as a Second Language) Center. Here, there is help with the English language.

What are your responsibilities as a student in a university classroom? First, you should be prepared for class. Read your assignment before coming to class. Next, you should be punctual and attend class regularly. Finally, you should be courteous and considerate. Don't talk, chew gum, or eat in class. Don't walk around or leave the class before asking the instructor.

You must follow attendance rules because you may be dropped for not attending classes. Missing classes is serious. You might miss an assignment, a quiz, a review for a test, or special information about an assignment. If you miss a class, you must find out what you missed. Ask someone in the class to help you. Punctuality means that you come to class on time. Being late distracts the other students and the instructor. If you come to class late, make as little noise as possible.

Know what your instructors expect of you. Different instructors will have different requirements and expectations. At the beginning of the semester, your instructor will give you a written syllabus. Read the syllabus and make sure you understand it.

Be prepared for each class. Finish your homework before class and be ready to hand in any work due. Eat, gather study materials, make phone calls, and unpack your books, notebooks, and pens and pencils before class starts.

It is important to have a notebook for each class or one notebook with dividers for each class. Taking notes is important in the classes. You should have an organized place to put all of your notes and class handouts.
