A. Read the following text then choose the correct answer (a, b, s, or d): (60 Marks)

Culture shock is an experience people may have when they move to a foreign country with a new cultural environment, which is different from their own. For example, when a student starts studying abroad, he/she experiences different things in custom, dress and food. There are many symptoms of transition shock including anger, boredom, extreme homesickness, eating disturbances and excessive critical reactions to host culture. Sometimes the symptoms last just few days, but more often they last weeks or even months. People experiencing culture shock usually move through four stages; they will initially have the honeymoon stage which is characterized by a positive feeling that everything is new and exciting. Then there will be the frustration stage, it may be marked by rejection of the new culture, as well as romanticizing one's home culture. But then, with some time and perhaps help from locals, people will start the adjustment stage and begin to feel more familiar and comfortable with the new environment.

Adaption and acceptance is the final stage which contributes to the successful integration. In fact, there is no magic solution for dealing with culture shock. Everyone has to find his or her own balance between the values of home country and those of the host country

The immune system has a vital role since it protects your body from harmful substances germs and cell changes that could make you ill. It is made up of various organs, cells and proteins.

As long as your immune system is running smoothly, you don't notice that it's there. But if it stops working properly- because it's weak or can't fight particularly aggressive germs- you get ill. Germs that your body has never encountered before are also likely to make you ill. Some germs will only make you ill the first time you come into contact with them. These include childhood diseases like chickenpox.

The task of the immune system

Without an immune system, we would have no way to fight harmful things that enter our body from the outside or harmful changes that occur inside our body. The main tasks of the body's immune system are:

- To fight disease- causing germs (pathogens) like bacteria, viruses, parasites or fungi, and to remove them from the body.
- To recognize and neutralize harmful substances from the environment.
- To fight disease- causing changes in the body, such as cancer cells.

How is the immune system activated?

The immune system can be activated by a lot of different things that the body doesn't recognize as its own. These are called antigens. Example of antigens include the proteins on the surfaces of bacteria, and viruses. When these antigens attach to special receptors on the immune cells (immune system cells), a whole series of processes are triggered in the body. Once the body has come into contact with a disease- causing germ for the first time, it usually stores information about the germs and how to fight it. Then, if it comes into contact with the germs again, it recognizes the germ straight away and can start fighting it faster .
