Monifa talks about her friend. Choose the correct words.

This is about my friend Halima. She  's Egyptian – like me – and she  's about 30 years old. We  're very good friends. We both work as teachers, but we  're not colleagues. I work in a school in Luxor, and Halima lives in Cairo. We  were at school together. Later, we  were at the same university, but we  weren't in the same class. I  was an art student, and she  was in the maths department. Now I  'm an art teacher, and she  's a maths teacher. We  're still good friends after 20 years.

Read the text. Are the sentences true or false?

My name's Halima and I'm a teacher in Cairo, the capital city of Egypt. I'm a teacher in an international school. I teach maths, but my classes are in English. In Egypt, we speak Arabic. It's very different from English. We don't have the verb be in the present tense, and we don't have a or an either. Writing is difficult for young students, because our Arabic writing is different. But my students watch TV in English and they speak good English. I speak English with some of my American colleagues at work. I have some English friends in Cairo, too. I love to show them around my city and to speak English with them.
