London coffee houses were very pleasant places, with their bookshelves, mirrors, pictures on the walls and good furniture. They were calm places where people talked politely to each other. If anyone started an argument, he had to buy a drink for everyone in the coffee house. During the next hundred years, coffee spread to other western European countries, where, at first, people drank it as a medicine. Soon it became a social drink, just as in Arab countries and Britain. In Syria, serving and drinking coffee have been at the heart of the country's famous hospitality for centuries. Conversations, discussions and transactions are made over a cup of delicious Syrian coffee. A guest's coffee cup is never empty in a Syrian home.
