The two most common causative agents of infectious diseases are the virus and the bacterium. They both are tiny to be seen by the naked eye, they can cause similar symptoms and are often spread in the same way. Bacteria are living organisms, but viruses aren't. A bacterium is a single complex cell. It can survive on its own, inside or outside the body. This allows bacteria to live in many places. soil, water, plants and the human body. Most bacteria aren't harmful; we have many bacteria on and inside our body, especially in the gut to help digest food. They also serve many vital roles in nature by decomposing organic matter and by converting nitrogen to chemicals usable by plants. On the other hand, viruses are smaller and aren't cells. Unlike bacteria, they need a host such as a human or an animal to multiply. Viruses only grow and reproduce inside the host cells they infect. Their life involves the hijacking of the biochemical activities of a living cell. Viruses and bacteria differ in how they cause infections.

- One of the similarities between bacteria and viruses is -----
 a. the way of spreading b. they are living cells
 c. they may be seen by naked eye d. difference in symptoms
- A bacterium can survive on its own, inside or outside the body because -----
 a. it is a living organism b. it is tiny

British education expert Anthony Seldon has a date for the robot takeover of the classroom: 2027. He predicts robots will do the main job of transferring information and teachers will be like assistants. Intelligent robots will read students' faces, movements and maybe even brain signals. Then they will adapt the information to each student. It's not a popular opinion and it's unlikely robots will ever have empathy and the ability to really connect with humans like another human can. A robot teacher is better than no teacher at all. In some parts of the world, there aren't enough teachers and 9–16 per cent of children under the age of 14 don't go to school. That problem could be partly solved by robots because they can teach anywhere and won't get stressed, or tired, or move somewhere for an easier, higher-paid job. Teachers all over the world are leaving because it is a difficult job and they feel overworked . Teachers waste a lot of time doing non-teaching work . So, If robots could cut the time teachers spend marking homework and writing reports, teachers would have more time and energy for the parts of the job humans do best.

- Experts expect that robots will replace teachers.
- Intelligent robots will have the ability to read students' faces, and brain signals.
- Robots will have empathy and the ability to really connect with humans.
- There are enough teachers all over the world.
- Robots are a good solution for the problem of increasing teachers.
- Teaching is a difficult job so many teachers quit it

As has been the case for many years, jobs, or forms of employment wherein employees perform a service or duty in exchange for financial compensation, play a prominent role in society. Furthermore, all jobs—even those of seemingly little significance—are important, as they simply wouldn't exist if their specific responsibilities weren't of value to employers , and the economy generally.

Teachers, or educational professionals tasked with helping students understand certain subjects and topics, are especially crucial today. In short, teachers help their students to become qualified for their future careers. Doctors, or medical professionals who specialize in providing health-related assistance to patients, are some of the most respected individuals in America and the world. It's the responsibility of doctors to help those who feel less-than-stellar to determine the underlying health issue(s) and recommend an effective treatment or remedy to a disease, disorder, or condition. Dentists , dermatologists and psychiatrists are just a few examples of the many different types of doctors. Police officers are law enforcement professionals whose job it is to protect citizens, solve crimes, and assure that rules and regulations are followed.

- Jobs play a vital role in each society.
- To be a teacher isn't important today.
- Teachers help students to choose their future career.
- Medical professionals are some of the most respected individuals in America only.
- There are different kinds of doctors.
- To protect citizens each society needs professionals like police officers
