Read the passage to answer the questions

At home, we all share the housework. My sister has to wash the dishes and dust the furniture, while I mow the lawn and take out the garbage. Sometimes, I have to babysit my little brother when my parents go out. It is unnecessary to complain about these chores because we all live in the same house. Using common sense, we know that helping each other is the best solution. When the weekend comes, we feel a sense of freedom. If we finish our work, we make suggestions for fun activities. Last week, there was a conflict; I wanted to go for a drive to the ocean, but my friends wanted to go to the mall. We reached a compromise and decided to visit the mall first, then go to the beach. My father gave me some pocket money as an allowance. It sounded like fun, and it was a great way to enjoy our free-time activities without feeling let down.
